

Week 3 in review

This week has been a hard week for me personally, I have been going through some family problems. Luckily this week in school, was a lighter load so I was able to keep up. I am still very much enjoying JavaScript and had some extra fun and research this last weekend after I had finished my assignments. My time management has still been a struggle, especially this week dealing with personal issues, but I am still achieving my goals.

I see the next week's hurdles being the final project, I want to produce something I am proud of and not too simple. Also once again, time management, always my biggest hurdle.

My goals this week are to overcome my obstacles with my time management as well as succeed in creating a good final project that reflects my growth this month.
