1. Github- I found the Git kind of hard to understand at the beginning of the month. It took me awhile to understand exactly what the point was. My brother is currently a Web Developer and I called him to get a little bit more clarity on the subject. We talked about it and he explained the concept and importance of the Git to me. After talking with him and realizing that I really had just made it more complicated in my mind, I didn't have a problem with it anymore. I found it more easy for me to set up the file structure and to add files to the Git just using Finder, and then would use GitHub to commit the changes to the Git.

2. Week/month in Review- The first two months I did well in most aspects, the hardest struggle for me was time management. I thought that I balanced it pretty well, and I think for the most part I do, but I seem to go in hard and tough and then not follow through. For example, the discussions, I would do well posting but I would forget to go back in and reply to peers. At the end of the month I feel that I was able to successfully manage my time and perform in the way I wanted.

3. I feel that my ability to overcome and concentrate on my weaknesses has definitely helped me. This class was challenging in the aspect of having multiple due dates instead of just one or two. I was forced to really pay attention and stay involved in the class throughout the week instead of just spending a day or two hitting it hard. I was able to realize that this is much more what my career will be, I won't be able to just get it done in two days and cut off from my job. I will have to stay involved and communicate with my clients.
